

MAKING CHANGE HAPPEN

NEED TO BUILD TRUST?

TRY THE GETTING STARTED DAY

A great starting point if you're looking to establish a strong foundation of trust for further change work.

What happens?

- Trust is essential for all teamwork. So we'll help people build this by getting to know each other and fully connecting as a team.
- We start with personal storytelling, exploring team purpose and new leadership, then the importance of psychological safety and trust in teams. Towards the end of the day we shift the focus to what they want to take back to the workplace and ways to work together better. We just facilitate – your people come up with the ideas.
- The getting started day is fun and relaxed. And a visual notetaker will give the team a different takeaway.

What do delegates leave with?

- Stronger trust and better relationships with their colleagues.
- A great basis for further change work.

Sandie Bakowski, organisational psychologist and founder of Making Change Happen, runs these workshops with other expert facilitators from the collective.

ONE DAY (10am–5pm)

10–35 PEOPLE

OFF-SITE LOCATION

The most deep and rich conversation I've had with my colleagues in years. We've achieved more today to bond as a team than we have in the last four months as a new unit.
